Your “Encore” Experiences

I am presently consulting on my own and not with any existing firm. My emphasis is in 3 areas; Community Building, Civic Engagement and Executive Coaching. I am doing a lot of training and presentations on these topics to cities and state city manager associations. I am associated with Common Sense California, a non-profit, focused on civic engagement for cities, counties, school districts and special districts. I am also associated with a start up company (www.GoGoVerde.com) that has developed a web site for use by neighborhood groups/associations/HOA's to help them build community. I am doing executive coaching for senior managers. I am also working with a developer who actually is focusing on building a community as he considers how to develop a large parcel of land.

I am traveling, skiing, working out, definitely not working on any budget, reading more, spending more time at our cabin and always looking at new options. A group of retired private sector managers told me that it takes 2 years to really figure out what you want to do in the next phase of your life. I have found that about right as I have been retired a little over 2 years.

Your Coaching Interests

Do you have any specific coaching interests?

- I have been coaching senior managers to help them reach their potential and become more successful.
