International Regional Summit 2017
Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic
Monday, March 27, 2017
9 AM – 3 PM

ATTENDING

MEETING CALLED TO ORDER AT 9:18 A.M.

WELCOME AND INTRODUCTIONS OF MEMBERS, GUESTS AND COMMITTEE MEMBERS
Committee chair Michele Meade thanked ICMA staff Ross Hoff, Lauren Crawford, Isabelle Bully-Omictin and Cintya Renderos who did an amazing job preparing for the committee meeting and summit. She invited everyone present to introduce themselves.

REVIEW OF SEPTEMBER 2016 INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE MEETING; REVIEW AND APPROVAL OF MEETING MINUTES
Michele M asked if there were any additions or changes to the minutes of the committee’s September 2016 meeting in Kansas City. Hearing none, she asked for a motion to approve the minutes. Ed Daley made a motion to approve; Cynthia Seelhammer seconded the motion. Those present approved the minutes.

UPDATE FROM THE ICMA EXECUTIVE BOARD
ICMA President Lee Feldman gave an update on the recent activities of ICMA’s Executive Board. At their meeting in February, the board adopted ICMA’s new Strategic Plan, which contains many references to ICMA’s international roles and work, and endorsed staff’s proposals to implement the plan. The board also approved the hiring of Peter Agh as ICMA’s first International Regional Director.
Isabelle Bully-Omictin introduced Altagracia Tavarez, Executive Director of the Federation of Dominican Municipalities (FEDOMU), which orchestrated the coming week’s summit events. Altagracia welcomed summit participants to the Dominican Republic and invited everyone to a welcoming dinner that evening. She said that FEDOMU is honored and excited to collaborate with ICMA. She noted that FEDOMU currently holds the presidency of the Federation of Latin American Cities, Municipalities, and Associations (FLACMA) and encouraged ICMA sign an memorandum of understanding with the organization at FLACMA’s meeting in August. Michele thanked FEDOMU for generously hosting the summit and said that summit participants look forward to the dialogue this week.

David Grossman, Director of ICMA’s Global Program Management team, gave an update on the team’s current international projects. (See attached presentation for details.) When asked for the number of ICMA members who are involved in ICMA international programs, David responded that members make up a majority of GPM’s approximately 150 volunteer advisors. He added that since pro bono practitioners have limited time to offer, GPM also hires a number of consultants to assist with the work. Ed Daley praised David’s presentation, noting that it was the clearest explanation he’s seen about how GPM is organized and where ICMA has a presence across the world. Michele M. agreed, noting that committee members often receive questions about ICMA’s international work and that this presentation will be an excellent resource. David commented that the presentation is a snapshot in time and committed GPM staff to supply updates for every International Committee meeting and as requested.

Isabelle Bully-Omictin, Director of ICMA’s Latin America and Caribbean Programs, gave an overview of the team’s current work and invited Altagracia to describe FEDOMU’s work in greater detail. Altagracia said that FEDOMU has been very involved in ICMA’s USAID-funded program on resiliency and the participatory planning processes in the DR. She said that there are FEDOMU coordinators in several municipalities and that FEDOMU staff are also involved with training and capacity building. FEDOMU is a municipal association with a 44-member council (43 of which are mayors) and a president who is elected by DR mayors for 2-year term. FEDOMU provides technical assistance, support, guidance, and advice to all 158 local governments in the country. FEDOMU is an NGO that advocates for municipal interests before the national government. Though municipalities are not required to be FEDOMU members, all are members because of the strong positive reputation of the organization. FEDOMU promotes transparency in local government, with a website where anyone can see how all local governments in the DR are spending their money.

In response to a question about the future of ICMA’s USAID-funded work in Latin America, staff said that it is too early to determine the new administration’s policies, but that a shift in priorities is possible.
SCHOLARSHIP RECIPIENT INTRODUCTION AND PRESENTATION

John Garvey Scholarship recipients Noor Shaikh and Alex Vazquez gave reports about their communities and the projects they’re working on. (See attached PowerPoint for details.) Both recipients were participants in ICMA’s Local Government Management Fellows program. They thanked the selection committee and all International Committee members for giving them the opportunity to participate in the international summit. Michele M thanked Noor and Alex for giving an energizing presentation, which demonstrates that the future of our profession is in good hands.

ALUMNI AND FRIENDS WELCOME

Mike Garvey reported on the International Committee Alumni and Friends Group, emphasizing that committee members can continue their involvement by participating in the group after their official term on the committee ends. The group is building a network of members willing to host international visitors and study tours, as well as to participate in ICMA’s international activities in other ways. In collaboration with ICMA staff, the group has designed an online mechanism for members to use to express their international interests and skills.

INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE CHARGE AND ACTION PLAN

Michele M. opened a discussion of the International Committee’s charge and action plan, noting that the ICMA board supported the summary included in the meeting packet when she presented it to them last September. She thanked Ryan, Kelly McAdoo and Victor Cardenas for a great conference call on this topic and invited comments on how to implement the plan, including any additional resources needed by the subcommittees to accomplish these goals. Monthly reminders were suggested, as well as the provision of materials (e.g., bullets, photos, list of funded projects with short descriptions) to use in making reports at regional summits and state association meetings.

Michelle C mentioned that younger members are especially interested in ICMA’s international activities and that we need to cultivate them for future international opportunities. Student chapters and the Emerging Leaders Development Program were identified as avenues for getting information out, as well as university communities outside the U.S.

Ed stated that when ICMA has specific needs for pro bono work, the committee can help spread the word about those opportunities.

Robin said that many members are astounded that international programs comprise about 50% of ICMA’s budget. To get the word out more effectively, we should share information about international programs with the IC Alumni and Friends Group as well as with the Regional Directors, Senior Advisors, and State Liaisons. It was noted that a small percentage of members attend the regional summits.

Simon noted that the normalization of the “I” in ICMA has come a long way in recent years, that a mindset shift has taken place in the administration of ICMA, and that the new Strategic Plan shows a significant increase in the focus on international activities. He challenged the association’s budgets, policy decisions, and investments to reflect this new mindset.

Michele M. said that in addition to the value of the great (almost overwhelming) amount of information ICMA supplies to members, personal stories are a very effective way to impress other members with the impact of international connections.
It was suggested that international content be added to ICMA’s leadership training courses.

Ross noted that the open rates of international articles in the daily SmartBriefs messages is low and encouraged everyone to open the articles and read them.

Ryan noted that ICMA members are not self-promoters and that many more members have been involved internationally than is publicized or promoted.

ICMA President Lee Feldman said that the ICMA Executive’s Board’s focus is on governance, being policy oriented and strategic. He believes there are two major aspects of ICMA’s international activities: to contribute to the professional development of ICMA’s members in the U.S. and abroad, and for international contract-funded work to contribute to the association’s financially stability. He views the International Committee as having the responsibility to “get into the weeds” in both areas. We need to be sure we have understanding of ICMA’s role in the world, that programs link to ICMA’s mission, and ensure that we don’t move too far off course. The commitment for the board and committee to meet together every three years at a location outside of North America is important, but the two bodies need to have more frequent dialogues. Programming led by the International Committee needs to be on the agenda at every board meeting.

ICMA President Elect David Johnstone commented that the challenge is much broader than increasing international membership numbers, that international connections need to start with strong affiliation agreements and connections.

Executive Director Marc Ott expressed strong support for the “I” in ICMA. Though he has been an ICMA member for more than 30 years, he was not fully aware of the significance of ICMA’s international work until he became Executive Director. He is certain that there are many other members like him who don’t know the extent of ICMA’s international work. He suspects that the international learning has been a two-way street now that we live in a world of almost total integration. Though there sometimes seems to be a certain tension about this topic, there doesn’t need to be. The board sees ICMA’s international work as a priority and as new Executive Director, he also is committed to it.

PROMOTING INTERNATIONAL INFORMATION (THROUGH WRITING ARTICLES FOR THE PM AND STATE ASSOCIATION PUBLICATIONS)

Michele M. solicited volunteers to write articles for PM, other ICMA publications, and state association publications about the upcoming summit and other ICMA’s international activities. It was suggested that it would be helpful if staff would provide drafts for committee members to tailor. Other suggestions were to require international scholarship recipients or committee members who don’t/can’t come to the summit to write articles. Michele M asked everyone to share information about the committee’s work on LinkedIn and other social media platforms. Michelle Crandall volunteered to write about the Zika presentation.

PRESENTATION FROM THE MINISTRY OF HEALTH ON DR RESPONSE TO THE ZIKA VIRUS

Before lunch, the committee heard a presentation from Dr. Ronald Skewes-Ramm, Coordinator of the National Program for Prevention and Control of the Arbovirosis (viruses that are transmitted by mosquitoes, ticks, or other arthropods including Dengue, Chikungunya, and Zika) about the DR government’s response to these threats. He noted that the main challenges are vector control
(distribution of teaching material, reduction of breeding places, larvicide application, mass media campaign), laboratory, clinical management, epidemiological surveillance, and risk communication. We should not be afraid of epidemic, we should only fear not being prepared, they will surely come. “Salud Somos Todos.” (See attached presentation.)

REPORTS FROM INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE MEMBERS ON OUTREACH DURING US SUMMITS. HOW DID IT GO? WHAT RESOURCES ARE NEEDED?

Reports were given on the U.S. Regional Summits that have been held so far this year, including presentations made about ICMA’s international programs. Greg Bielawski reported that he attended the Midwest Summit, where he was given an opportunity to enhance the knowledge level of state leaders in region about ICMA’s international work. ICMA’s international work was not mentioned at the West Coast summit. Michele M. will make a presentation at the Northeast Summit and Andrea Arnold will make a presentation at the Southeast Summit.

ICMA INTERNATIONAL AFFILIATE RELATIONS

Reports were given by the liaisons to several of ICMA’s international affiliates. There are still a few affiliates for which an International Committee liaison has not been identified. David Niemeyer reported that he has a conference call scheduled with the executive director of CAMA (Canada) in a few weeks. Michelle C. said that representatives from the Honduras affiliate will attend the San Antonio conference. Cynthia Seelhammer has had email conversations with affiliates in India including CMAG (Gujarat), where there is a huge growth of cities. Representatives from CMAG plan to attend the San Antonio conference. She heard from Manvita Baradi (UMC) that there is a need for local government experts to spend several weeks in Ahmedabad to teach. Christal Weber (Indonesia) and Jim Nichols (Philippines) are working jointly together to connect with their two affiliates. Judit Deilinger offered to see about reviving ICMA’s relationship with the affiliate in Hungary. Ryan noted that he has had difficulty communicating with the affiliate in Ireland, but is continuing to try. Michele M. referred to the outreach many committee members received recently from students in Tilburg, Netherlands as part of exchange program they are working on for the Dutch affiliate, VGS. Andrea has talked with Karen Thomas, the executive director of the New Zealand Society of Local Government Managers. Michele M. noted that she is trying to connect to the affiliate in Norway through connections managers in Nebraska have. She also relayed regrets from IC Vice Chair Kim Ryley (U.K.) for not being able to attend the meeting. See Raoul Lavin’s report in the committee’s agenda packet about his contacts with the affiliate in Vietnam. Robin noted that she had just signed up to be the liaison to ECAT. Some ICMA members have had informal ties to a group in Cuba; development of a relationship is slow and delicate, but some dialogue is going on.

Michele M. asked if there is anything else that would be helpful to affiliate liaisons in doing their work. Committee members were encouraged to use the Knowledge Network Group to record their contacts with affiliates. The value was noted of the international affiliate organization meeting at conference, which in Kansas City was well organized by international Vice Presidents Marc Landry and Lars Wilms. Add the names of ICMA staff contacts to the affiliate spreadsheet.

Michelle C. reported on the work of the subcommittee that is updating the state association guide for establishing international programs. (See handout attached.) The subcommittee surveyed state associations and received responses from 20. Some of those associations without international programs are interested in receiving examples of active successful programs in other states. The subcommittee has requested the details of current programs in Minnesota, Nebraska, and Pennsylvania. The update to the guide will be finalized by the time of the annual conference in San Antonio.

Cynthia S. asked if it would be possible to schedule visits by participants in the US State Department Professional Fellows programs so the visitors could attend state association meetings. David G. responded that staff can provide schedules for upcoming fellows exchanges. Ryan noted that the Pennsylvania state association meeting included an informal roundtable discussion about international connections that was successful. Andrea suggested create a menu of possibilities for state associations to consider adopting.

SUSTAINABILITY OF SCHOLARSHIP FUNDING (GARVEY AND HANSELL)

The committee addressed the topic of the sustainability of international scholarship money, the current balances of which are $25,159 (Hansell) and $24,174 (Garvey). It was noted that in the past the committee has reached out to alumni for donations. Ideas: see if these funds could get a percentage of the Life, Well Run funds; add international scholarships as another choice on ICMA’s donation webpage; add a donation option to the membership renewal form; ask the board to add a fee to membership renewals to be marked for scholarships funds; cap scholarship amounts at a lower level or have a variable cap depending on the destination; seek corporate sponsorships by adding to the menu of ways corporate sponsors can contribute to the profession; have the Alumni and Friends Group spearhead a solicitation. Ross will update Martha Perego on the various ideas. Cintya mentions that Rame (a company based in Mexico) is involved with this summit and is interested in connecting with the wider ICMA international world.

DISCUSSION REGARDING SELECTION OF FUTURE INTERNATIONAL REGIONAL SUMMIT LOCATIONS IN CONJUNCTION WITH ICMA EXECUTIVE BOARD

Michele M. opened a discussion of future international regional summit locations, noting that the Executive Board is scheduled to have a meeting outside of North America in early 2018 and that the committee’s policy is to conduct the International Summit and International Committee meeting in conjunction with international board meetings. The Philippines is in the lead as a venue for the 2018 meeting and staff will consult with the prospective hosts to confirm within the next couple of months. A backup plan will be developed, too.

Michele M. noted that we should start thinking about the 2019, 2020, and other future international summits and that it is important to schedule the summits in conjunction with another planned meeting or event in the host country. David G. noted that the affiliate in Israel is becoming more engaged, that he and Lee will be going there in July, and that they can bring up the possibility of having a future international summit there. We could also look again to Europe as Peter pursues his work with the ECMN and as ICMA’s International Regional Director. Isabelle noted that Honduras has a strong municipal association and would be a possible venue for a future summit, especially if ICMA wins a new project there. Other potential venues include India (UMC is opening a new office in New Delhi), Sri Lanka, and Jordan. It was noted that the conversation about future summit sites will involve ICMA’s three international vice presidents.
UPCOMING COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Michele M opened a discussion of future International Committee meetings, including the possibility of having a summer meeting in Washington, DC, conference calls, and web meetings. The consensus was to experiment with having remote meetings (using technology that can accommodate a large number of participants) before scheduling another in-person meeting in DC or elsewhere and that the entire committee should be surveyed on the issue.

FOR THE GOOD OF THE ORDER

Michele M called for additional topics for the good of the order:

- Cynthia highly recommends participation in the “YES” exchange program for hosting students from countries with large Muslim populations.
- Ryan suggested recommending to the board that the size of the committee be increased, since there is so much interest in it.

LAC Programs Overview and Highlights

- First municipal development program financed by USAID in Central America - in Honduras (1991-93)
- First USAID-funded municipal development partnership program in Mexico (1997-2002)
- Created ICMA LA with support from ICMA – 2003 to present
- USAID-funded decentralization and municipal strengthening program for Latin America (1999-2006)
- USAID-funded municipal crime and violence prevention program in Central America and the Dominican Republic (2009 – present)
- Mexico Crime and Violence Prevention program (2012-15)
- DR Planning for Climate Adaptation (2015-2019)
Planning for Resilient Municipalities (aka Planning for Climate Adaptation)

Objectives: promote participatory land use planning processes to reduce vulnerabilities and increase resilience at the municipal level.

Technical approach:
- Capacity-building of and partnership with local institutions, including the Dominican Federation of Municipalities
- Training municipal personnel and community organizations in participatory planning and adaptation techniques
- Engaging community-based organizations in communicating the impacts of climate change to vulnerable populations (small grants, communications campaign)
- City-to-city partnerships
- Resource Organizations
Planning for Resilient Municipalities

Accomplishments:
- Provided inputs to a National Land Use Planning Guide
- Established technical groups in the municipalities
- Conducted city-to-city partnerships
- Initiated technical courses in with local university, INTEC
- Conducted stakeholder mapping process and vulnerability assessments
- Conducted training to integrate vulnerability assessments and adaptation planning/adaptive management into land use planning process

Funding: USAID; $6.6 million; March 2015 – March 2019
Municipal Partnerships for Violence Prevention in Central America and the Dominican Republic

Objectives: Promote municipal-based violence prevention programs; promote regional peer knowledge networks; and provide assistance to local governments and community groups, in coordination with police efforts.

Technical approach:
- City-to-city partnerships with U.S. cities and police departments;
- Training in community-oriented policing;
- Creation of municipal crime and violence prevention committees;
- Sharing of information through a website: http://www.amuprev.org
Municipal Partnerships for Violence Prevention in Central America and the Dominican Republic

Accomplishments:
- Supported creation of 18 municipal Crime and Violence Prevention Committees
  - Current program – 3 in Honduras, 2 in the DR
- Created a Network for Violence Prevention made up of national municipal associations
- Produced 10 videos of successful municipal-led violence prevention initiatives
- Completed a municipal-led violence prevention toolkit
- Developed a training program on the Brazilian Pacification Police Model

Funding: USAID; $5 million; October 2009 – September 2017
What we’ve achieved

1. Support for decentralization processes
2. Strong alliances with municipal associations
3. Focus on professional local government management
4. City manager in Mexico!
5. Pushed the agenda for municipal role in crime and violence prevention
6. City-links model

RD emite alerta por fiebre Chikungunya, que se transmite por mosquito que causa dengue

27/01/2014 12:50 PM - SHAIRA CASTILLO

El Ministerio de Salud, el pasado lunes, emitió una alerta epidemiológica por la circulación en el Caribe de Chikungunya, aunque a la fecha no ha registrado ningún caso en RD.

Se trata de un enfe de un mosquito que transmite el virus que causa fiebres de hasta 40°C, dolor de cabeza, y dolores musculares. Los síntomas duran entre 7 a 10 días.

En el Caribe se registraron 139 casos en la isla de Martinique entre el 12 y 29 de diciembre por lo que el gobierno de esa isla ha declarado una emergencia, para hacer un plan de control sanitario.

El reporte de la OMS el pasado 2 de diciembre ha informado que el virus ha aparecido en el sur de Argentina y en Chile, y se espera que entren en América del Norte a través de los puertos de Miami y Nueva York.

El virus, que se originó en África, llega con mayor frecuencia en adultos. Las mujeres embarazadas son más vulnerables, ya que el virus atraviesa el manto de la placenta e invade el sistema nervioso fetal. El virus que se introduce en el recipiente causa una fiebre alta, dolores musculares, y una inflamación de la piel que mantendrá una cicatriz a largo plazo.

REPÚBLICA DOMINICANA TRATA DE EVITAR INGRESO DE VIRUS CHIKUNGUNYA

Por Joaquin Tejada Gómez en enero 29, 2014

SANTO DOMINGO.- El gobierno de República Dominicana trabaja para evitar la penetración a esa nación caribeña del virus Chikungunya que ya se ha propagado por varios países de la región. El Ministerio de Salud de República Dominicana emitió el martes una alerta epidemiológica al comprobar la presencia del virus Chikungunya.

• Measures for vector control
• Characteristics of Aedes aegypti
• Self-care recommendations

• Factors that constitute a barrier to prevention and control
  • Low risk perception
  • Behaviors: inadequate water storage practices
  • Cultural: Behaviors linked to myths, do not bring patients to health services in time.
Conclusions

- Epidemics travel with peoples
- National Plan before onset
  - Directives for healthcare personnel, Vector control, Household visits
  - Risk communication
- Average of outbreak: 21 weeks (min 7; max 31)
- Zika outbreak similar to Chik behavior
- Different pattern according to population density.
- Zika notification under different disease syndrome “EFE”
  - Lack of experience / New event
- Surveillance system must be flexible to capture new events
We should not be afraid of epidemic, we should only fear not being prepared, they will surely come

State Association Guide – Establishing International Programs
Summary of Survey Results & Next Steps

A survey was emailed to the State Association Presidents of 49 state associations. Responses were received from 20 state associations. Four of the associations responded that they currently have in place some type of an international program for their membership. Below is a list of the respondents.

State Associations with Programs

Of the 20 participants, four responded that they have an international component to their state associations.

Pennsylvania stated that their international activities include:

- Information exchange with municipal associations or other local government support institutions in other countries
- Highlighting international best practices or case studies in publications, web site, and other information programs
- Provide a scholarship to support participation in ICMA’s International Manager Exchange Program or other international exchange programs
- Inviting and/or hosting international colleagues at the annual conference or at other association events
Minnesota stated that their international activities include:

- Organizing study tours to other countries or organizing study tours in the US for local government managers from other countries

The two other state associations with existing programs did not provide types of international activities they are engaged in.

The values that the associations see in engaging in international activities are shown in Table 2.

State Associations without Current Programs

Reasons for Not Participating in International Activities

80% of the participating state associations responded that they do not have an international component. The reasons provided are shown in Figure 1. Many participants indicate that international engagement is not included in their association mission (8 associations) and that it is not a priority for their organizations (9). Several associations also noted as a reason that they do not see any value in engaging in international activities (5).
Information/Support Needed to Consider a Program

Figure 2 indicates what types of information and support state associations are seeking in engaging in international activities. Many of the participating associations are seeking examples of international activities, with some interests in information about international professional development opportunities and assistance with setting up international exchange programs.

Still Needed
- Additional case studies are still needed. Can Committee members reach out to their state associations?
- Do we need educational programs or ICMA workshops to be offered at State Association annual conferences?

Dear Members:

I am overwhelmed by the outpouring of well wishes in response to my March 31 email. Thank you so much for your support, encouragement, and optimism. This “Dear Members” column is the second in what I hope will be a series of informal communications with you.

During the last week in March, I attended my first ICMA international meeting, the 4th International Regional Summit, which was hosted by ICMA’s affiliate, the Dominican Federation of Municipalities (FEDOMU), in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic (DR). The objective of the week’s meetings was to create a space where we could exchange national and international experiences in municipal management in areas related to the promotion of resilient cities. We traveled to the DR because ICMA is currently working on two projects in that region focused on climate adaptation and crime. Both projects are funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID).

I was deeply affected by the experience. As an ICMA member for 35 years, I had never fully understood the important role that our professional association plays in the world, particularly the impact we have in developing nations. During the six days that I was in country, I learned what the “I” in ICMA’s work was all about, and I want to share my experience with you.

My education began the moment I stepped off the plane at Las Américas International Airport, where I was immediately mesmerized by the colorful culture and language of the people. During the ride to our hotel, the local scenery clicked by outside my window like pictures in a flipbook; scenes of aging infrastructure and dilapidated housing in the poorer neighborhoods that gradually gave way to a sophisticated Caribbean city with a bustling downtown.

My first day in country, I attended the International Committee meeting, where a group of 14 internationalist members—capably led by Chair Michele Meade—ICMA President Lee Feldman, President-Elect David Johnstone, staff, and I reviewed the committee’s work plan. The plan was designed to ensure ongoing and meaningful connections with ICMA’s 31 international affiliates, the ICMA Executive Board, and other association committees and task forces on international issues. Over lunch, the committee received a fascinating briefing from the DR Ministry of Health on the country’s response to the Zika virus and similar threats.

On days two and three of the summit, we joined local mayors and municipal staff, FEDOMU executives and staff, national government officials, international cooperation agencies, and International Committee members for a variety of presentations and workshops related to the construction of resilient cities.

Over the course of the summit, I realized that in the DR, the USAID-funded programs and projects are as much about addressing the hardships of the human condition as they are about providing a contracted list of... deliverables. Local officials in the DR face many of the same challenges that we as managers in developed nations face on a daily basis—land use planning, climate resilience, and the social prevention of crime and violence. Unlike the challenges in many of our communities that resulted from the Great Recession, shifts in the economic landscape, or demographics, the challenges facing DR officials require a level of resources and expertise that is virtually unavailable in country. Thus the importance of the municipal development work in which ICMA is engaged to build the capacity of local individuals and organizations.

The most poignant part of the trip for me came when Lee Feldman and I took a long walk away from our hotel and found ourselves in a part of Santo Domingo where the poverty is pervasive, and it seemed as if every section of housing and infrastructure was in disrepair. We sat outside a bodega on a corner and watched the vehicular traffic and pedestrians converge at a busy intersection where there were no traffic signals. We were in awe that the people weren’t struck or that the cars didn’t crash into one another.

It was while sitting at that corner that, for me, the trip transitioned from professional to personal. I recognized the frustration and exhaustion in the faces and voices of so many of the people, and I suddenly understood why ICMA is there. We are there to make a difference, to enhance the quality of life for this developing region’s residents.

It was difficult to leave the DR at the end of our six days, but if all goes as planned, ICMA’s successful work in this region will continue for several more years, and I will have an opportunity to return to the region. The challenges that the DR (and many other parts of the world) face are great, but there are numerous opportunities for ICMA and for us as members to share our expertise and bring back knowledge to our own communities. It’s a two-way street, and seizing these opportunities takes commitment and leadership. I encourage each and every one of you to consider participating in ICMA’s international programs to help improve the lives of millions of individuals throughout the world.

I want to thank ICMA staff members Isabelle Bully-Omictin, Cintya Renderos, Ross Hoff, Lauren Crawford, David Grossman, DR-based ICMA team, and the FEDOMU staff and leadership for their outstanding work on this trip. Kudos for a job well done!

Sincerely,

Marc A. Ott
